The New Seven Wonders of the World – Part 5 (Angkor Wat in Cambodia)

This is part five in a series of photo journals meant to document the imaginary trip around the world of the students of Wichita Collegiate School’s Early Childhood division. Through physical activity, they are visiting the “New Seven Wonders of the World” and the fourteen remaining finalists.

Following Spring break, students returned to their imaginary world travels in Physical Education. Cambodia was their next destination as they visited a stone temple called Angkor Wat that is surrounded by forest and a moat. It is one of the 14 finalists. Students learned various hand positions (bud, flower, leaf and fruit) for a Cambodian dance and also participated in a children’s game called “ptat kao sou.” In this game, opponents attempt to push rubber bands into a square marked on the floor or dirt. Any rubber band landing on a line or outside the square is not counted. Students had fun working on this fine motor skill and counting their number of rubber bands that landed inside the square.

Thank you for sharing our world travels with us.
Be sure to visit Part 6 of our photo journal as it becomes available.
